DESCRIPTION

Sport Management is an interdisciplinary field of study that draws from a wide range of academic disciplines, including business, management, law, and communication. Each discipline can be applied to the business enterprise of amateur and professional sport, as well as the management of highly effective teams in sport, corporate America, or other management related professions. While public and private sector sport operation is the topic of a large segment of the curriculum, the thoroughly interdisciplinary emphasis of the sport management major aims to educate students in the skills and theory necessary to assume leadership roles both in and out of sport.

Career preparation for leadership and entrepreneurial positions is the ultimate goal of the sport management major at Rice. Students will acquire a solid academic and practical foundation and thus will be competitive for opportunities that include entering the sport business industry or applying to the country’s best law and business schools.

Students will complete a minimum of one internship prior to graduation, often with one of the professional teams in Houston (Rockets, Astros, Texans, Dynamo, Comets, and Aeros). Students also will receivce networking and out-of-class developmental training, as these play a significant role in obtaining high-profile positions in collegiate and professional sports.

Rice is one of a very small number of universities that has received “program approval status” from the North American Society of Sport Management. This is the highest level of academic achievement available in the field.

Students are encouraged to go to www.sport.rice.edu for the latest information about the major.

See SMGT in the Courses of Instruction section.
